Our dear friend and coworker, Terry Nerhus was diagnosed with stage 4 pancreatic cancer last fall. His family and friends are putting on a benefit motocross race west of Fort Dodge on Saturday, March 31st. The goal of the benefit is to have a fun and laid back race! All proceeds will be donated to Terry & Joyce Nerhus.

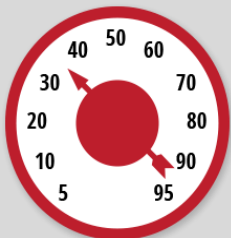

Keeping your tanks full will help you achieve the best fuel quality possible.

STORAGE TANK CONTAMINATION STARTS WITH CONDENSATION

- Caused by humidity, temp changes.
- Water will drop to the bottom and fuel will keep it from evaporating.
- In five years, 16 gallons of water can accumulate in a 500 gallon tank.
- Water will cause rust and allow for the growth of microorganisms.
- Keep tanks full to limit condensation. When full, corrosion inhibitors will be in contact with tank surface.

How to read your propane tank gauge:

Your tank gauges are located under the lid of your tank. There are two gauges, the percent gauge and the pressure gauge. The percent gauge will tell you how much LP is remaining in your tank; this is the gauge with numbers from 5 to 95. Remember to check your percent gauge before ordering propane!
